

ABSTRACT

A facility for communicating between two computing devices is described. The facility determines a first computing device has been connected to a distinguished computer network that is connected to a second level computer network. The facility then utilizes the distinguished computer network and the second level computer network to establish contact with a second computing device that is outside the distinguished computer network.